THERE IS A GARDEN IN HER FACE. AN OLD POEM-1606

There is a garden in her face, Where roses and white lilies blow : A heavenly paradise is that place, Wherein all pleasant fruits do grow: There cherries grow that none may buy, Titl cherry-ripe themselves do cry.

Those cherries fairly do inclose Of orient pearls a double row, Which when her lovely laughter flows, They look like rosebuds filled with snow : Yet them nor peer nor prince may buy, Till cherry ripe themselves do cry.

Her eyes like angels watch them still. Her brows like bended bows do stand, Threatening with piereing frowns to kill All that approach with eye or hand These sacred cherries to come nigh Till cherry-ripe themselves do cry.

NEW ORLEARS, February 4, 1869. ODORS AND MEMORIES, -Wonderful is the link between odors and memories. A sprig of wild mint or pennyroyal takes me back to early childhood and sunny fields bordered by old oaks and chestnuts, and down the fox-grape hollows, all now grown visionary in the dis-tance. A breeze across a barn in mid-Winter will set us in the Summer fields amid the new own hay and the songs of the bobolinks and the murmur of the woods. Every one with the least musical ear knows how subtle and powerful is the link between certain tunes or passages of music and persons, places scents associated with them; how they set us musing on the past, and unlock the mysterious chambers of memory. Not less subtle and powerful are the product of the ful are the enchantments of odors. There is as much poetry in them as in sights and sounds. A lady with a sandal-wood fan will diffuse around the room delicate dreams of Araby the Blest. The rose in her hair or on her bosom, the bouquet she holds in her hand, the faint perfume of her dress, will carry one's thoughts not only to the flower-garden and the conservatory, but to all the amenities of refined female society. She will move about south. She will bring with her everywhere a suggestion of refined culture and Christian civilization. By which remarks I must not be understood as disparaging the konest occupation of a sutler, or intimating that there is aught in it that unfits a man for being a Senator afterward. On day Senator can not have had a better schooling than the rugged discipline of the sutler's wagon affords. It trains him in those habits of self-preservation and economy, which pracable him to save a million out of a salary of five thousand; and the maledictions over scale of prices, or the imprecations over the toughness and leatheriness of his dried beef, prepare him to bear with fortitude the enfriendly criticisms of political opponents, or the envenomed shafts of calumny, which irresponsible newspaper scribblers are ever hurling at the virtuous head which genius and ability elevate and exhibit above the level of the crowd."

A few nights ago a person in the disguise of the Kuklux garb was captured in Lawrence-burg, Tennessee. The officers of the law lost no time in removing his mask, when lo! and behold, he turned out to be a negro as black as the ace of spades. He was placed in con finement and will have a trial.

PRESIDENT JOHNSON.

PARTING ADDRESS

WASHINGTON, March 3. To the People of the United States: The robe of office, by constitutional limita tion, this day falls from my shoulders, to be immediately assumed by my successor. For him the torbearance and co-operation of the American people, in all his efforts to adminster the Government within the pale of the Federal Constitution are sincerely invoked. Without ambition to gratify, party ends to subserve, or personal quarrels to avenge at the sacrifice of the peace and welfare of the country, my earnest desire is to see the Constitu-tion of the Republic again recognized and obeyed as the supreme law of the land, and the whole people, North, South, East, and West, prosperous and happy under its wise provisions. In surrendering the high office to which I was called four years ago, at a orable and terrible crisis, it is my privilege, I trust, to say to the people of the United States a few parting words in vindication of an official course, so ceaselessly as-sailed by political leaders to whose plans and wishes my policy to restore the Union has been obnoxious. In a period of difficulty and urmoil almost without precedent in the history of any people, consequent upon the clos-ing scenes of a great rebellion and the assasnation of the President, it was, perhaps, too much on my part to expect of devoted partisans who rode on the waves of exciteent which, at that time, swept all before them, that degree of toleration and magnani have advanced us infinitely further on the we have thus far attained instrument to schemes of confiscation and of general and oppressive disqualification, I ald have been hailed as all that was true, loyal, and deserving, as the reliable head of a the people of the republic: party, whatever I might have been as the Executive of a nation. Unwilling, however, to accede to the propositions of extremists, and bound to obey, at every personal hazard, my oath to defend the Constitution, I need not, perhaps, be surprised at having met the fate f others whose only rewards for upholding onstitutional rights and laws have been the consciousness of having attempted to do their duty, and the calmer judgment of historyof time. A mysterious Providence assigned to me the office of President. I was, by the terms of the Constitution of the United States, the commander-in-chief of nearly a million men nder arms. One of my first acts was to disband and restore to the vocations of civilife this immense host, and to divest myself as far as I could, of the unparalleled powers then incident to the office and the times. Whether or not in this step I was right, and how far deserving of the approbation of all, the people can now, on reflection, judge, when reminded of the ruinous condition of public affairs that must have resulted from the continuance in the military service of such a vast number of men. The close of our do-mestic conflict found the army eager to disinguish itself in a new field, by an effort to punish European intervention in Mexico. By many it was believed and urged that, aside rom the assumed justice of the proceedings, foreign war, in which both sides would heerfully unite to vindicate the honor of the national flag and further illustrate the na tional prowess, would be the surest and speediest way of awakening national enthusiasm, reviving a devotion to the Union, and occupying a force concerning which grave doubts risted, as to its willingness, after four years active campaigning, at once to return to the pursuits of peace. Whether these specula-tions were true or false it will be conceded direction indicated. Taking advantage of that feeling, it would have been easy, as the Commander-in-chief of the army and navy. with all the nower and patronage of the Pres dential office at my disposal, to turn the cor centrated strength of the nation against Freuch interference in Mexico, and to inau-

been received with favor by the military and a large portion of the people. It is proper, in this connection, that I should refer to the almost unlimited additional powers tendered to the Executive by the measures relating to civil rights and the Freedmen's Bureau. Contrary to most pre-edents in the experience of public men, the lowers thus placed within my grasp, were deined as being in violation of the Constitu on, dangerous to the liberties of the people nd tending to aggravate rather than lesser authority, it would have been no difficult task Republic, and to make secure my continuand

Let the people whom I am addressing from the Presidential chair during the closing hours of a laborious term, consider how diferent would have been the present condition reign conquests, of personal aggrandize ent, and the desire to wield additional power et them, with justice, consider if I have no induly magnified my office, the public bur ns have not been increased by my acts, and housand or tens of thousands of lives sac-ificed to visions of false glory. It cannot, therefore, be charged that my ambition has been of that inordinate or criminal kind which, to the detriment of the people's rights and liberties, ever seeks to grasp more, and unwarranted powers, and, to accomplish its purposes, panders too often to popular prejudices and party aims.

What, then, have been the aspirations which have guided me in my official acts? Loveliest weight on lightest part.

Joy-abundant weman!"

Those acts used the explanation. They have elsewhere been explanation to the perfumes which seem so and become a part of the nation's history. By them I am ready to be judged, knowing by them I am ready to be judged, knowing the second part of the nation's history. that, however imperfect, they at least show to the impartial mind that my sole ambition has been to restore the union of the States, faithfully to execute the office of President, and, and defend the Constitution. I can not be censured if my efforts have been impeded in the interests of a party faction, and if a politic many intended to reassure and conciliation was intended to reassure and conciliation. the best of my ability, to preserve, protect ate the people of both sections of the coun try was made the occasion of inflaming and the restoration of the Union; in every way dividing still further those who were only recently in arms against each other, yet as it to rest my case with the more deliberate judgment of the people, and as I have already intimated, with the distant future. The war, all must remember, was a stupend ous and deplorable mistake. Neither side understood needed was accomplished by the acknowledg-ment of the terrible wrong and the expressed ment of the terrible wrong and the expressed better feeling and earnest endeavor at atonement shown and felt by the prompt ratification of the constitutional amendments by the Southern States, at the close of the war. An appeal to the nation is attended with too much delay to meet the emergency. While, if left free to act, the people would correct in time such evils as might follow legislative usurpation, there is danger that the same power which disregards the Constitution, will deprive them of the right to change their rulers, except by of the right to change their rulers, except by revolution. We have already seen the jurisution, for the interest and protection of the people and exercised by Washington and his successors, has been rendered nugatory by a partisan majority of two-thirds, in each

It is obvious that rithout such an amendment, the Government, is it existed under the Constitution, prior to the rebellion, may be wholly subverted and overthrown by a two-thirds majority in Con-gress. While public attention has been carefully and constantly turned to the past and exposed sins of the South, the servants of the people in high places have boldly outraged their trust, broken their oaths of obedience and indermined the very foundations of liberty, ustice and good government. When the re-cellion was being suppressed by the voluteered services of patriot soldiers amid the dangers of the battlefield, these men crept, without question, into place and power in the national conneils. After all danger had assed, when no armed foe remained, when a enitent people bowed down their heads to e flag, and renewed their allegiance to the overnment of the United States, then it was it pretended patriots appeared before the nation, and began to prate about the thous-ands of lives and millions of treasure sacriced in the suppression of the rebellion. They have since persistently sought to in flame the prejudice engendered between the of a bold, defiant and treacherous Cabinet officer. They have robbed the Executive of the prerog ative of pardon, rendered null and void acts of elemency granted to thousands persons under the provisions of the Condeplorable migrare. Retther side discretished the other, and had this simple fact and its conclusions been kept in view, all that was legislative attempts to exercise this power in needed was accomplished by the acknowledgwas an error which now only time can cure, and power in disgrace. Getting Old Together.

Some years ago a young man of the name of Charles Letenier, fell in love with the laughter of the physician with whom he was studying. The physician was not rich, and Charles had nothing, so that, after all, he was very bad match for Elise Desmond, par ticularly as there was a very rich banker who had asked for the hand of Mlle. Elise, thinking, as a matter of course, that her heart rould accompany it.

Monsieur Desmond accepted the banker's settlement with great delight, and Mme. Desmond assured her daughter that from expe rience it was not at all necessary to love her

Elise cried a good deal, and Charles swore that he would never love any one else; yet, spite of both these facts, Elise was duly maried to the banker, and Charles immediately sailed from Havre in the first ship to New Orleans. Elise and Charles had bad a last interview, in which they had vowed all sorts of loving and romantic nonsense, and, among other things, that should Elise ever be free, she would fly to the other end of the world to mite herself to her faithful Charles. But the banker, though some years older han his wife, possessed a good digestion and hard heart, and consequently was not likely to die, and so he lived for almost twenty-five years, when, at length, he gave up life and fortune, leaving Elise a widow, and if not an inconsolable one, at least a very rich one. Elise had rarely heard from Charles, but in order that there might be some link between them, she had constituted herself guardian to nephew of his, an orphan. Elise had no children of her own, and she ved this boy for his own sake, for he was worthy of love, and also because he reminded her forcibly of the lover of her youth. Her usband had, on his part, also adopted, not nephew, but niece, Melanie Sevre, who ved with them, and had for Elise the care and affection of a daughter.

Now it so happened that Charles' nephew had a regular correspondence with his uncle, from whom he disguised nothing, owning even he love he felt for Melanie. He gave a glowing description of her beauty, but forget to mention her name. Charles, who had still pre erved in his heart the image of Elise as she was on her wedding day, concluded that his

"Charles Letenier! Can it be?"

"Elise!" responded Charles, "can it be?" The fact was that both had forgotten to ake the addition of how many twenty-five and twenty-five would come to, and twenty five and twenty-one; but now it all came with Charles was not aware he looked his age, ut he thought Elise looked fully hers.

In this condition of things the conversation ragged considerably. Each had prepared we speeches to say to one another, but now bey would sound ridiculous. Elise, in order reak an awkward silence, drew a pretty ld box from her pocket and asked Charles he would take pinch a of snuff.
"My Elise taking snuff!" almost shrieked e astonished Charles.

For a cold, simply. Charles, nothing daunted, drew forth a pipe 'The ladies in New Orleans always allow 'My Charles with a pipe!" exclaimed Melanie, feeling very much inclined to laugh, called the attetinon of Charles to a picture she had just finished. Charles adanced with Elise to the table and examined he drawing, when, on looking up, suddenly the routhful lovers of former years discovered on ach of their respective noses, gold glasses. Fearing to make any new discoveries, Charles took his leave but was not long in coming to his senses, and on his return to lise no longer expected to find a young girl but was obliged to acknowledge that Elise was quite a fine woman. Elise had also dised that at fifty a man was in the prime e. Their meeting was therefore more of life. and their conversation pleasant,

When the carriage stopped at the door, Charles rushed to meet Elise. They had never, even in their younger days, been more glad to see each other.

Elise ordered supper, and Charles made her a champagne punch. After supper, Elise, seated by the fire in a comfortable wrapper played chess with Charles, whilst Melanie and Maurice sat in a corner looking at the moon streaming down on them. "Pray light your pipe; I know you are onging for it," suggested Elise.

"Give me a pinch of snuff, Elise," Charles And as Elise handed it to him, he detained her hand.

When we compare the paying capacity of the country now, with ten States still in poverty from the effects of war-but soon, I trust, to emerge into greater prosperity than ever before—with its paying capacity twenty-five years ago, and calculate what it probably will be twenty-five years hence, who can doubt the feasibility of paying every dollar then with more ease than we now pay for useless luxuries. Why, it looks as though Providence had bestowed upon us a strong box, the precious metals locked up in the sterile mountains of the far West, which we are now forging the key to unlock, to meet the very contingency that is now upon us. Ultimately it may be necessary to increase the facilities to reach these riches, and it may be necessary, also, that the General Government should give its aid to secure this access; but that should only be when a dollar of obligation to pay secures precisely the same sort of dollar we use now, and not before.

Whilst the question of specie payments is in abeyance, the prudent business man is careful apout contracting dobts payable in the distant future. The nation should follow the same rule. Prostrate commerce is to be rebuilt and all industries encouraged. The young men of the country—those who from their age must be its rulers twenty-five years hence—have a peculiar interest in maintaining risit her country residence and asked Maurice to go with her. JOHN M. WASHINGTON died at Newbern, N. , on the 14th inst. He was born November 19, 1819, in Wayne county, North Carolina. His father was grandson of Lewis, uncle of General George Washington. He was a grad-uate of Yale College in 1841, and also proce-cuted his studies in the Law School at New Haven, Conn. He returned to his native State and practised law successfully till 1854, when he visited Europe. Immediately after the surrender of Lee he returned to Newbern, the progressive portion of the community as a Mayor of the city. He leaves behind him wife and eight children, three of them males.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

A MALARIOUS MONTH. - March, which gives us a new President, is also the inaugural month of nany disorders. Entangled in its fogs are the seeds of coughs, colds, and of that alternation of rigidity and fire, more widely known than adgired, called fever and ague. The only way to avoid these "little unpleasantnesses," is to render the system strong enough to fight off the atmospheric poison that produces them, and the best way merits to Americans. But as our population is in-creasing at the rate of a couple a millions a year, in the natural way and by immigration, it may be as well to hint to the rising generation and new arsimple (the old actilors know all about it). And the control of the c rivals, (the old settlers know all about it), that HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS is the most wholesome and potent vegetable tonic ever manufactured; that it is a specific for debility, dysheir complications; that it is not " bad to take," and is utterly harmless.

pheric poison that produces them, and the best way to endow it with that repellant power is to tone it with HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. If a wayfarer were credibly informed that a ruffian was waiting at the next corner, he would doubtless turn in his tracks, and take a safer route to his destination. With just about the same amount of trouble, the attacks of diseases prevalent at this season may be evaded. Nay, the trouble will be less, for drug stores lie in every one's route, and every respectable druggist in the Union keeps on hand HOSTETTER'S BITTERS. The article is a staple of trade, and it would be as easy to find a grocery without sugar as the store of an apothecary without this popular tonic remedy.

In view of the experience of the nation with regard to the article, during the space of twenty years, in seems almost unnecessary to recapitulate its merits to Americans. But as our population is increasing at the rate of a couple a millions a year, or she was a sond to see a sum of the store of an apothecary without this popular tonic remedy.

A glow came forth to meet me From the flame that laughed in the grate, And shadows adance on the ceiling, Danced hither with mine for a mate. 'I claim you old friend," yawned the arm-chair, "This corner you know, is your seat;"

'We know the practical finger," Saith the books, " that seems like brain ; And the shy pages rustled the secret It had kept till I came again. Sang the pillows, "My down once quivered.

'Rest your slippers on me," beamed the fender,

"I'll brighten at touch of your feet."

On nightingales' throats that flew Through moonlit gardens of Hafiz To sather quaint dreams for you.' Ah me, where the Past sowed heart's ease,

The Present plucks rue for us men! I came back : that sear unhealing Was not in the churchyard then. But. I think, the house is unaltered, I will go and beg to look

Af the rooms that were once familiar. To my life as its bed to a brook, Unaltered! Alas for the samenes: That makes the change but more,

Tis a dead man I see in the mirrors. 'Tis his tread that chills the floor ! To learn such a simple lesson,

Need I go to Paris and Rome That the many make the household, But only one the home? 'Twas just a womanly presence, An influence unexprest,

But a rose she had worn, on my grave-sod Were more than long life with the rest? 'Twas a smile, 'twas a garment's rustle,

'Twas nothing that I can phrase, But the whole dumb dwelling grew conscious. And put on, looks and ways. Were it mine I would close the shutters, Like lide when the life is fled, And the funeral fire should wind it,

When she, its soul was borne To lie all dark on the hillside That looks over woodland and corn.

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption. and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a rehable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a provision against sudden attacks of Coup, it should be kept on kand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them. Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the discase seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear. toral they subside and disappear.
Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly nued by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the theory Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need
